

■ CONTENTS

I. INTRODUCTION . . . . .	9
I.1. The works and research issues . . . . .	9
I.2. Historical memory and the narrative sources . . . . .	22
I.3. The progress of literacy . . . . .	31
II. THE BEGINNINGS OF MEDIEVAL HUNGARIAN HISTORY WRITING . . . . .	43
II.1. The European background and Hungarian historiography . . . . .	43
II.2. The heritage: testimony of the library catalogues . . . . .	53
II.3. Early Hungarian narrative sources (11th–12th centuries) . . . . .	61
II.3.1. Historiographic environment . . . . .	61
II.3.1.1. An overview of some contemporary European works . . . . .	72
II.3.1.2. Parallels with the Norman historiography . . . . .	87
II.3.2. The problem of Annals. The Annals of Altaich . . . . .	89
II.3.3. The Annals of Pozsony (997–1203) . . . . .	95
II.3.4. The king image of the Investiture Controversy on German soil and in Hungary . . . . .	102
II.3.5. Accuracy and historicity in certain chapters of the Hungarian Chronicle composition (89–90, 102, 103, 104, 121, 123, 153) . . . . .	115
II.3.5.1. From the weeping Árpád to the tearful Saint Ladislas. Military commanders shedding tears in chapter 39 of Anonymus's Gesta and chapters 121 and 137 of the Chronicle composition . . . . .	133
II.3.5.2. Court and popular register in the German chronicles of the 11th and 12th centuries. Contact points of early Hungarian and German narrative sources . . . . .	143

II.3.5.3. The European background of chapter 60 of the Chronicle composition. Historiography of the Battle of Lechfeld (955) and the beginnings of Hungarian historical critical analysis . . . .	157
III. THE GESTA OF ANONYMUS (MAGISTER P.) . . . . .	167
III.1. The Gesta in general . . . . .	167
III.2. Anonymus, the Excidium Troiae and the 12th-century renaissance . . . .	177
III.2.1. The cultural environment of the 12th century . . . . .	177
III.2.2. The Excidium Troiae . . . . .	182
III.2.3. Assessment of the Italian traces . . . . .	189
III.2.4. Style and contemporary reality . . . . .	193
III.2.5. Depiction of the conquest in the work . . . . .	203
III.2.6. Archaizing in the gesta . . . . .	209
III.2.7. Legal customs, heroic memory . . . . .	214
III.2.8. Blood oath . . . . .	215
III.2.9. Customs related to weaponry . . . . .	216
III.2.10. The good and bad archer. Vilissimi et pessimi. The controversial testimony of the narrative sources . . . . .	217
III.2.11. On the style and use of words of the gesta . . . . .	224
III.2.12. Mentions of the Black Sea in Anonymus's work and in the Scandinavian sources . . . . .	231
III.3. Certain legal-history aspects of the gesta . . . . .	235
III.3.1. "Landnahme" and conquest in the legal literature . . . . .	235
III.3.2. The occurrence of a passage from The Etymologies of Isidore of Seville (5, 14) . . . . .	243
III.4. Striving for historical authenticity . . . . .	246
III.4.1. Dreams and lies . . . . .	246
III.4.2. The Hungarian raids in Regino's chronicle and the Hungarian narrative sources. Contacts between Anonymus and the Chronicle composition . . . . .	250
III.5. On the afterlife of the manuscripts of the Illuminated Chronicle and Anonymus's Gesta . Connection between the Taribi Ungurus and Anonymus's Gesta . . . . .	262
IV. NARRATIVE SOURCES AND THE LITURGICAL MEMORY . . . . .	271
IV.1. Liturgical veneration. Conversion and saint kings . . . . .	271
IV.2. Saints: Stephen, Adalbert, Ladislav . . . . .	289
IV.2.1. Saint Stephen in the sources . . . . .	290
IV.2.2. Saint Adalbert in the sources . . . . .	294

IV.2.3. Saint Stephen in Bamberg .....	301
IV.2.4. Saint Ladislav, the warrior saint .....	309
V. AT CROSSROADS OF HUNGARIAN AND WESTERN HISTORICAL MEMORY .....	339
V.1. Hungarian aspects of the chronicle of Adémar de Chabannes .....	339
V.2. The Scheyern group of sources .....	349
V.2.1. Interpretations .....	351
V.2.2. Summary .....	364
V.3. Earliest written sources of the Hun tradition in Hungary and their European connection .....	369
V.3.1. The 11th-century South German Attila tradition and its Hungarian connections .....	372
V.3.2. The written tradition in Hungary .....	377
V.3.3. The so-called Battle of Tárnokvölgy and its place in the Hun–Hungarian tradition .....	385
V.3.4. Attila’s tomb .....	392
V.4. Late reception of a European tradition: Charlemagne and Hungary ....	395
VI. CONCLUSIONS .....	405
SOURCES AND BIBLIOGRAPHY .....	409
Abbreviations .....	409
Dictionaries .....	412
Primary sources .....	413
Secondary literature .....	423
INDEX OF PERSONAL NAMES .....	495
INDEX OF GEOGRAPHIC NAMES .....	519